Rally is back! After the COVID pandemic forced nearly a year hiatus on California Rally Series (CRS) stage rally, competitors return to Rangely Colorado this weekend. Featuring almost 140 stage miles, Rally Colorado is set to be the longest event of the CRS 2020-2021 Super-Season. The event will hold seven stages on Saturday June 5, and another seven on Sunday June 6.

Rally Colorado takes place on twisty and undulating stages in the mountains of the northwest corner of the state. As life returns to normal, so will spectators to the stages here, which are some of the most scenic in North America. New for 2021 is a Super Special Stage where racers will put on a show for the fans just outside the town center.

In Open Four-Wheel Drive Class, Scott Crouch is looking for redemption after not finishing this event last year. He retired after three stags in 2020, but had respectable pace on the first loop. Hopefully his Subaru will fare better this weekend. He faces class competition from Kenny Niernberg and co-driver Zach Pfeil, also peddling a Subaru on these technical roads.
